

It is very important that K-Love be allowed to continue to serve my community and others like it. Currently, a parent cannot trust most radio stations to broadcast music that is safe for families, especially those with young children. Much of the music on today's airwaves is morally offensive in both lyric and innuendo. If stations like Klove are forced from the airwaves, consumers are left with few options that are safe for children and young people. Without Klove, many young people are left with no opportunity for a positive influence in their lives. Due to the deterioration of the support structures within our society, it is imperative that Klove be allowed to continue reaching out to the public by offering a positive influence for today's radio consumers.
